Mr. Hutchison:

You have been harassing me, and other staff, for now months. You called former staff members at their place of employment, in different countries, threatening them if they refused to talk to you (stating it "would be in their best interest to talk to you"). You sent numerous emails to different addresses with incessant insults and questions, although you were told, repeatedly, that no statement would be made.

Now, you are even messaging me relentlessly, in the middle of the night, despite me blocking your email address and asking you to no longer contact me. You have also continued to email my former employer, despite their request that you stopped doing so.

Every time, the level of belligerence increases, and the grammatical style of some of your statements is now consistent with death threats we have received through anonymous emails. I even now have concerns with respect to your state of mind and psychological stability. A professional journalist just doesn't harass people with personal rants in the middle of the night, or is so blind to factual information.

Your attempt to backtrack on your statements with respect to the CBSA disclosing information about me to you are duly noted. An action, however, has already been filed in Canada. Another action will also be filed in the EEA. If the agency has indeed disclosed information, the consequences will be dire and I would expect that some people's careers may be affected. If the agency hasn't, then it will mean you have lied once again, which will certainly further undermine your credibility with the public.

Lastly, now that there is the prospect of a federal agency illegally releasing sensitive information at the secret security level, affecting in the process several individuals, involving several countries, and even undermining the Canadian criminal judicial system, we have no choice but to stop the disclosure for security reasons of any information whatsoever to any Canadian government agency, including the BC HRT. Your harassment, unprofessionalism, and lack of ethics, journalist or otherwise, has now deprived Paquette of any possible resolution in her claim. Well done.

In closing, I have no choice at this point but to notify law enforcement agencies, and I ask you, once again, to stop harassing me, any people with Amaruk, or any people directly or indirectly involved with me, Amaruk, or any related company.

Govern yourself accordingly.

Dear Christophe Fragassi-Bjornsen Fragassi Sönnungr

An unnamed Aramak official tells me in a style and tone identical to your own that you are no longer associated with the company. Which is another tough one to swallow, as ever, considering your representations from yesterday. It will be interesting to see how that plays out at the BCHRT, where full disclosure is required.

In any case, I will respect his (your) request to end our correspondence now, via dispatch@amaruk.com, noting, of course, that you have received my previous emails sent to that address and have chosen to reply via another email address, for obfuscation purposes, I gather.

But I wanted to give you a heads up on the CBSA. You have no evidence of slander because there isn't any. You have no evidence that any of your standard, because there isn't any. You have no evidence that any of your former colleagues have breached any employment-related privacy requirements. They have not. You might spare yourself more heartaches and the patience of all officers of the court, but by all means, proceed as you wish.

Thank you again for your very helpful letter that arrived yesterday.

Regards,
Brian

Mr. Hutchison!

What a delightful surprise to read you again! Shouldn't you be fornicating with your wife, or who knows what else, at such a late hour?

Now, with all your sources, you couldn't get my actual name right. It must be quite frustrating! Why don't you ask your buddies at CBSA to enlighten you? And do you honestly believe that some trash talk have changed facts about what I am, or what I do? Seriously? And you call talking to a crack-addict, while carefully avoiding all the documentation that are part of public and government records that don't suit you, as investigating? Do you actually believe people care about what you write? Or remember it for that matter? I guess I should be honored that a national paper wasted paper alleging that I had multiple identities, a male partner, and lived in a basement. Definitely newsworthy.

Mr. Hutchison, one only needs to read a few of your articles or positions to understand what you are all about. I would also point out that no non-Christian outlet has run any similar story, and reputable media carefully stayed away from the whole thing. Even the French version of CBC threaded far more carefully.

Interestingly, I was wondering the same thing about your own childhood. What possibly happened that made you lose all the fundamental and traditional traits of a man? What fucked you up so much that you cannot even think straight, now accusing me, again, of copying and pasting my own photos?

So many question, so few answers indeed. How frustrating for you must it be that, no matter what you do, no matter what you say, no matter what threats you make to people who know me, you are not getting any information!

After all you wrote in these personal emails, you had to bring some political correctness into the whole thing, by condemning my use of the word retard? Mr. Hutchison, I thought that, at the very least, you had a pair!

Now, you're bragging about CBSA essentially disclosing personal information to you about me? Opinions involving amusement and relief ought to involve personal information, or disclosure of otherwise protected personal information. Is that really wise? Shouldn't you have thought the whole thing through and not let your emotions take over before making such statement? Because although I found your communications up to that point quite entertaining, and I am all in favor of freedom of the press, I am far less understanding when it comes to the Canadian government.

Well, do pass my regards to my CBSA former colleagues". Do it quickly though. Somethina tells me that once I have filed legal action against CBSA for breaching my privacy (which led to slander), chances are, not many people within the agency will ever talk to you again, or to the National Post for that matter.

You have just jeopardized your newspaper relationship with a federal agency, and you have initiated an action that is going to waste a lot of taxpayer resources. Maybe it would be best if you stop communicating with me. Or put more bluntly, if you get a life.

Warmest regards,

Dear Christophe Fragassi-Bjornsen Fragassi (do I have that right?),

Wax sealed envelopes, coats of arms, and now "retards." It's all very 19th century!

I'm sure the faux-riche accoutrements, myriad identities, Nordic pretensions, cut-and-paste photos (there's some rich irony, eh?) and anachronistic vernacular of an itinerant basement dweller impress the gullible pikers of whom there are...well, let's be honest (it's in the dictionary), you haven't fooled anyone for very long, have you?

Genuinely curious, what's with your haunted obsession with Christianity, and the predilection for assigning Christian beliefs to anyone who takes the time to investigate and expose your peculiar fantasies? I could hazard a guess, but perhaps you did have a wonderful childhood, after all.

So many questions. So few answers.

Please keep up the good work; your unfortunate "retard" and sexist comments aside, you have a real knack for comedy! Come to think of it, you might have a future as an accidental comedian, should all that other stuff finally flame out. But we're all sure there's some furtive life left in Amaruk etc.

Last thing, if you don't mind, I'll pass along your regards to your former and still rather amused (and relieved) colleagues at the CBSA. Once again, I ask you to do likewise with all your many hard working employees back in Norway and elsewhere, none of whom, sadly, seem extant. Must be such a chore to keep track of so many identities.

Glad to see you have taken today's light-hearted correspondence in the spirit intended.

Always a pleasure,
Brian

Dear Mr. Hutchison:

Thank you for your kind letter.

I am rather surprised you found mine extravagant. Certainly, when your trailer trash-style familiarity have you call me by my first name, anything in contrast must appear, well, extravagant indeed.

I would not dignify what you wrote with a response. Besides, it isn't like you had no idea most of what you published wasn't factual. Let's also remember that the other "media" you are referring to are some small town reporter from a bankrupt public broadcaster that has become an embarrassment to Canada, and tabloids, typically only read by retards and Christian extremists (with the terms being interchangeable). Yes, only people who think the world is 6,000 years old could possibly believe the crap these publish!

Thank you so much for your concerns about what you call my inexplicable absence. I trust my letter shed light on the situation, and now explains why my representation was no longer required. At the risk of disappointing you, I'm afraid I wouldn't have made the trip myself anyway. I am also sorry to hear I have experienced new difficulties and changed residence (yet again?). I wasn't aware of it. Maybe you should contact one of your "anonymous" sources again to get an update! As long as you've got crack, he will tell you whatever you want to hear. Ask him about the new species he spotted over his house (built with proceeds of crime): the strawberry falcon. I really think it's a great story for you. Plus, it must be exhausting to pursue crusades against heretics in a Province where the vast majority of the population doesn't share your views!

As for the Amaruk new web site, I am delighted you personally particularly enjoyed that photo. I thought it would call on some dark repressed sexual secrets, so common among devout Christians. Plus, with a little more hard work, and by trashing a few thousand more people, who knows, one day you may be able to afford a stay on that property! Here's a few more pictures, so it's something to look forward to! Sorry if 3 of these photos are of a basement! But as we know, I really fancy basements!

Thank you so much for your good wishes! Christian freaks harassing Heathens always tend to bring more business! I wish you the best as well, and please, do have a little fun while you're on this earth. For some reasons, I do in fact tend to think that your actions as such a good Christian are far more likely to get you eternal damnation in hell than a trip to heaven!

Warmest regards,

C

Dear Christopher,

Thank you for the extravagantly prepared letter, which I received today.

(In future, should you wish to address what you feel are inaccuracies, "sensational and false reporting" and ethical lapses in the National Post, the CBC and any other media, please bring them to the attention of the writer and editors. Be specific. Try to avoid being pedantic.)

We were all disappointed not to have seen you at the settlement conference on Thursday, which of course you initiated. We were especially concerned at your inexplicable absence. We now understand that you've been experiencing still more difficulties and have been forced to change residences, yet again. It must be a terrible inconvenience for you.

On a more positive note, your new website design with the nude male models is very impressive; we're sure it will attract the type of clientele, employees and/or others whom you seek.

Best of luck on future adventures, to you and your many Norwegian staff members, associates, clients etc etc etc

Regards,
Brian
